Kentucky.

The situation in Kentucky fulfills almost to the letter the prediction made by The Star last week. Mr. Goebel has been defeated for election, as he was in his canvass before the people for the gubernatorial commattee. The question now, as then, is, can be set aside the verdict and by the force of sheer highhandedness se cure the prize. He has certain advantages now, as he had then. But can he play the game of rough and tough a second time? Will the people of the state submit, as the mitted, to be robbed of their rights?

Allowance must be made for the disclo ires of the past three months respecting Mr. Goebel's character. At the Louisville convention he stood forth as a resolute man rd, made up of his own letters, votes and confessions, could not well be blacker. He has betrayed in turn both the gold cause and the silver cause. He has in intimacy and confidence. Indispa facts, his own handwriting supportng them, show him to have been the unspeakably vulgar aggressor in the Sandford tragedy. Had all these things been known last summer, could such a man have malitical convention, wearied by a week of wrangling and scheming? They are known now. Can a man weighted down with such obloquy put a foul hand upon the decision e people rendered at the polls?

He is the kind of man to make the mos of a turbulent situation. He likes a fight His largest stock in trade is his audacity. And behind him now will be arrayed the element which naturally funcies a riotous at election times and swagger around on the hunt of bets, worthies who are quick on trigger, and those who on general principles love and fatten on a row.

But the question is more than deciding wagers, higher than the exhibition of barof who shall sit in the governor's chair at Frankfort for the next four years. And that question is likely to arouse the best spirit of the best men of the commonwealth. Horse pistol heroics, it is to be presumed, will not avail to rob white men of their suffrage.

Completing the Cordon. Gen. Wheaton has now landed his force of 2,500 men at Linguayan, on the gulf of that name, and is already moving eastward, according to a dispatch received today from Gen. Otis. Thus the Luzon campaign is being pressed with vigor. The country round about Cabanatuan, where Gen. Lawton is established, is still badly flooded by the rains, but the waters are falling and active operations will doubtless be resumed shortly. Indeed, Gen. Young has already pressed northwestward to some With Wheaton moving eastward from Linguayan and Lawton northward from Cabanatuan the test of the present maneuver to corner Aguinaldo ought soon chiefly marked by the hasty retreat of the plans is expected to result from the operations of these next few days. If the Mabalacat as Tarlac is approached it will be taken to show that the rebel headquarters are still maintained at Tarlac. If, however, there is a precipitate retreat before the American advance northward it will be assumed that Aguinaido has retired to Bayambang, leaving only a rear guard south of him. He is of course aware of the presence of American forces north of him, for there was sharp fighting at the landing of Wheaton's brigade. In addition, too, it is to be assumed that the Tagai leader has been informed of the purpose to send this force to the Gulf of Linguayan, for he is known to have agents at various places who keep him in touch with such portions of the American plans as are published. The question now comes whether he will be able, with this knowledge, to make good Emperors in Contab.

Nicholas and William are closeted to sether at Potsdam and all Europe has its ear to the ground, listening for an indication of their intentions. An echo of what they are discussing is afforded by the following paragraph printed in the Potsdam Intelligenzblatt, an official journal published within the shadows of the emperor's

There is no doubt that the Emperor Wil-liam, whose most fervent wish is to find practical means for maintaining the peace of Europe, and the czar, who has developed the theory of the world's peace, both have their eyes directed on South Africa, where at the close of the nineteenth century war is raging. At the same time the fact is not to be overlooked that not to be overlooked that Count Mouravieff not to be overlooked that Count Mouravien carried on negotiations for several weeks with M. Delcasse. It has been stated that nothing was definitely arranged in Paris. This goes without saying, as without the Support of Germany no arrangement would have had the slightest effect. The eyes of the world are directed toward Potsdam with the greatest anxiety, while from that point the solution of the Transvaal problem is expected. England could not pos-sibly ignore representations from the pow-ers. There is no doubt that the czar is the

In this connection a curious parallel is passible. England by her refusal to join the European powers a year and a half ago which would have confronted this country with grave embarrassments. It is within the chances now that Germany, by holding back from the advances of Russia and Under such circumstances the ties that bind England and Germany together would be strengthened, despite the fact that Germany was piqued last year at England's refusal to join the continental combination in behalf of Spain.

Readable Advertisements. The merchants of Washington are setting pace for those of the other cities of the country in the matter of preparing their trade announcements to the public. A glance through the advertising columns of The Star will amply show how superior are the modern statements from the shops and stores to those of a few years ago, before licity. To the average person there is often no more readable portion of the issue than these advertising columns, replete with information and affording a bright, accurate picture of the city's daily life. The art of advertising has advanced materially in this particular in a very short time, and it is the judgment of all experts in the national field that Washington deserves a large share of the credit for the innovation. The advertisement readers-who have increased remarkably in number since the new ideas began to prevail-appreciate the change. They now find the perusal of the trade announcements in The Star a pleasure to which they look forward from issue to is sue. The merchants have learned, for one thing, that the more frankly and fully they take the public into their confidence the more surely the public will patronize them. Therefore these announcements reflect the fluctuations of the trade and the causes which contribute to produce rising or falling prices. It is difficult to estimate accurately the educational effect of this de parture from the former method of merely stating the name and location of the establishment and leaving it to the caprice of the customer to determine whether he will purchase or not. By this process of infusing a certain amount of literary quality into the advertisements the merchants take the first long step toward the customer in invitation and instruction. Thus the new method is of benefit to all concerned, the merchant, who stimulates a wholesome interest on the part of the possible purchaser; the customer, who finds where he can buy best and cheapest, and the newspaper, which by serving as the medium of communication between these two parties. broadens its range of circulation, increases its power as a popular agency and secures a profit which both sides are willing and eager to pay for the privilege of using this daily bulletin.

Good Manners at the Theater. A prominent actress interrupted her own performance last night at one of the New York theaters, in order to rebuke a group of people occupying a box who were chatting and laughing to the infinite annoyance to be applied. The enemy is being pressed of both players and auditors. The latter northward by MacArthur, who yesterday applauded the actress for her pluck and occupied Mahalacat after a fight which was hissed the offenders out of the house. The incident points the fact that theater-goer insurgents. An indication of Aguinaldo's are as a rule much more considerate nowadays than formerly. There is no more grievous annoyance than the constant buzenemy offers material resistance north of zing of conversation or laughter during a play. Yet it is but seldom that such interruptions occur, so thoroughly have the play-goers learned the lesson of mutual consideration. The almost total disappearance of hats from the heads of women in the theaters is evidence of this fact. Whereas formerly it was considered proper to converse during the rendition of an opera, such a display of bad manners is row almost always rebuked, and the average auditor is assured of an opportunity to hear what is said or sung upon the stage.

The New York World and the Evening Post having thrown up their hands in consequence of Tuesday's voting, other admissions that the people are with the administration in its Philippine policy may be looked for from day to day. Some interest attaches just at present to the manner in which the Hon, William E. Mason, still a senator from Illinois, received the news. His resignation has not yet been filled. He is giving the country another chance. He hates the thought of parting and hopes against hope that Congress, having been chosen before the malevolent influences of imperialism began to work in the public veins to the full, will undo the wrong of criminal aggression and prevent the overpowering disaster of a vacancy in one of the most ample chairs in the upper

If Ohio could be provided with a democratic legislature Mr. McLean would doubtless enjoy being called "senator" even more than "governor."

The administration now hopes that Gen. Otis wili be as successful in chasing Tagals as Judge Nash was in overtaking votes.

The reports of republican victory in Massachusetts may have had something to do with starting Aguinaldo's stampede.

Mr. Sam Jones' one regret is that Cuyahoga county cannot make arrangements to do business as a separate state.

Admiral Dewey proceeded on the assumption that a wedding is strictly the business of the parties concerned. English Pluck.

In some of the comment on the British reverses in South Africa the opinion is expressed that the English are for the first time since the Crimean war having their mettle tested; that their fighting for many years has been with savages dressed in breech clouts; that it requires more grit to go up against a column wearing trousers, and so forth. There is of course a difference between fighting the hill men of India and fighting the Boers, but the soldier who has acquitted himself well in the field in India does not lack for grit. He may have to learn many things in the field in South Africa, but how to steady his nerves and risk his life is not one of them. We may take the case of our own soldiers in the wars with the Indians. The men who have done service in the west have been among the bravest of our soldiers, judged by any standard. The enemy, proper person to make these representations. May these be the result of today's meeting. In this case the visit of the czar to Potsdam will be an event in history."

William likes to pose in the glare of the world's footiights. Just now his attitude is that of the friend of peace. He is in connemy at once changes into a succorer. He shares his grub and his flask of water with the captive. But in the Indian uprisings in the west there has always been the specter of the scalping-knife for the wounded be hind the danger of the savage's rifle. So sian possessions, it is difficult to accredit that, all things considered, some of the truest pluck that has ever been exhibited by the American soldier has been developed in the Indian fighting on the western fronier. The man who has gone courageously through that has no greater depths of luck to be sounded. The English soldiers who have fought the all tribes of India, or the savages in South Africa, cannot possibly be weaklings or stand in need of soldierly training. Some of that service has been brilliant. All of it has been hazardous. Their enemy has never lacked for grit or tools or numbers. He has always been cruel to the wounded, and that has always been a factor in the

The men who are now facing the Boers, therefore, are worthy of the Boers' steel. There has been disaster, but no humiliation. The best of tacticians now and then miscalculate. No Englishman has as yet run away. The boot has been on the other leg. He has gone too far in the direction of the enemy without providing himself with proper support. The war has just begun. He will get his bearings later. There need be no withholding of praise from the Boers. They are fighting men worthy of anybody's steel. They have the advantage now; but they are likely to fight well even after the tide turns. Tuesday's Victory for Expansion. rom the New York Sun.

The great victory of Tuesday was of the policy of expansion of the administration; the great defeat was of the humbug and reactionary spirit of "anti-imperialism.

A Victory for Expansion. from the New York World.

The elections mean a victory for imperialism in a majority of the states vot-ing. There is neither honesty nor profit in denying this. They mean also a triumph for Mr. McKinley—but a triumph that was made easy by Mr. Bryan and his friends in thrusting again to the front at the beginning of the campaign the futile and fatal fallacy of free silver and the thrice-condemned Chicago platform.

Nothing to Fight For.

From the New York Journal, Undoubtedly the Philippine insurrection will be suppressed and peace restored long before the meeting of the national conven-tions. Will not the democrats be in a pitiable position then if they persist in oppos-ing expansion? Expansion will then be an irrevocably accomplished fact. Who would dream of casting Hawali adrift now? Yes it was only last year that the democratic leaders were opposing the annexation of Hawaii as bitterly as they are now opposing the annexation of the Philippines. If they commit themselves now to a policy that will be totally obsolete before the presidential campaign begins they will leave themselves nothing to fight for when the crisis comes.

The National Verdict. From the New York Evening Post.

Although no Federal officials were chosen tricts to fill vacancies in the House of Representatives, a national aspect was given to the campaign in so many states that the result must be accepted as a verdict of the country on the McKiftley administration, and especially on its policy of expansion. The judgment of the people was so clearly expressed that no room is left for doubt as to the attitude of the nation. Oblo is the state upon which all eyes have been centered. The important feature of the result is that, leaving Cincinnati and Cleveland out of the account, the state at large gives a much greater majority in support of the McKiniey administration on its policy of expansion than it gave in the corresponding election two years ago, before that policy had developed. The President has his own state behind him. Indorsement of the administration is equally clear elsewhere. Iowa furnishes the clearest test of popular sentiment regarding the expansion issue. In that state there were no local, personal or factional considerations involved. A democrat of high character ran against the excellent republican governor. The democrats dropped the silver issue and made resentatives, a national aspect was given democrat of high character ran against the excellent republican governor. The democrats dropped the silver issue, and made their fight on the question of expansion. The republicans met them without shrinking. The result is a greatly increased republican majority.

A similar state of feeling has been disclosed everywhere. The issue of expansion was made openly and clearly yesterday in the Frankiin-Hampshire district of Massachusetts, where Mr. Parsons, who, as a republican member of the last legislature, opposed imperialism, ran for re-election as
